(2) The order made under sub-section (1) may make different provisions in relation to different classes of qualified persons subject to registration and may provide for exempting from any requirements of the order of any class of qualified persons with respect to whom the Central Government is satisfied that particulars sufficient for the purposes of this Act can be ascertained otherwise than by virtue of those requirements.

(3) If any qualified person fails to comply with any requirement of the order made under sub-section (1), he shall be liable to be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

(4) The Central Government shall ensure—

(a) that upon an application duly made for registration under this Act, the name and address of the applicant together with the particulars of the matters with respect to which information was given by the applicant in pursuance of the order made under sub-section (1) are entered in a register kept for the purposes of this Act, to be known as the "National Service Register"; and

(b) that upon the applicant being registered, a certificate of registration is issued to the applicant in the prescribed form.

(5) The information contained in the National Service Register shall not be used for any purpose other than the purposes of this Act:

(8) (a) If any change occurs in the name or address of any qualified person while such person remains registered under this Act, or if any such person acquires any additional academic or professional qualification or distinction, he shall forthwith communicate the change of his name or address, or, as the case may be, the acquisition by him of additional academic or professional qualification or distinction to the Central Government in the prescribed manner and at the same time return to the Central Government, for correction, any certificate of registration held by him and if he fails to communicate the change of his name or address, or, as the case may be, the acquisition by him of the additional academic or professional qualification or distinction, he shall be liable to be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

(b) Upon the receipt of a communication of the change of name or address of any qualified person registered under this Act or of acquisition by him of additional academic or professional qualification or distinction, the Central Government shall cause the necessary corrections to be made in the entries in the National Service Register and shall either cause the certificate to be corrected and returned to such person or cause a fresh certificate to be issued to him.

(9) The Central Government may, by rules made under this Act, provide for the issue, in specified circumstances, of fresh certificates of registration in place of certificates which have been lost, destroyed or defaced.

(4) The Central Government may make regulations for the examination of the physical and mental fitness of persons subject to registration under this Act and such regulations may, in particular, enable the medical and other authority—

(a) in a case where he is unable to complete the examination on one occasion, to direct the person examined to submit himself for a further examination on a specified time and place;

(b) to direct the person examined to submit himself for examination by a specialist.

(5) The Central Government may by regulations determine the categories in which persons examined under this section are to be placed with reference to their physical and mental condition.

(6) If any qualified person fails to comply with the requirements of a notice served on him under sub-section (3) or any regulations made or directions given under sub-section (4), he shall be liable to be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

(7) The court by which a qualified person is convicted of an offence under this section may, without prejudice to any penalty which may be imposed on him, order him to submit himself to an examination of his physical and mental fitness, further examination or examination by a specialist, as the case may be, at such place and at such time as may be fixed by the court and any such order may provide that such person shall be detained in custody until that time and shall be taken by a police officer to that place and at that time:

Provided that no person shall be detained in custody by virtue of any such order for more than twenty-four hours.

(8) A qualified person who, having been ordered by a court under sub-section (7) to submit himself to an examination of his physical and mental fitness and to be detained in custody, is taken by a police officer to the place and at the time at which he is to be examined, does not submit himself to an examination of his physical and mental fitness in accordance with the order, he may be arrested by a police officer without a warrant.

(9) A qualified person, who fails to submit himself to an examination of his physical and mental fitness in accordance with an order made under sub-section (7), shall be liable to be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, and also with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

(10) A notice served on any qualified person under this section shall cease to have effect if, before that date on which he is required to submit himself to an examination of his physical and mental fitness, he ceases to be subject to registration under this Act.

(11) The Central Government may pay to the medical or other authority, specialist, or any qualified person undergoing examination of his physical and mental fitness under this section such travelling and other allowances, including compensation for loss of remunerative time, in accordance with such scales as may be prescribed.

Enlistment for national service.

14. (1) Subject to such priorities as may be prescribed, the Central Government may cause to be served on any qualified person for the time being liable under this Act to be called up for national service, who has been found, after an examination of his physical and mental condition, fit for such service, a written notice in the prescribed form (in this Act referred to as the "enlistment notice") stating that he is called up for national service in such one of the Armed Forces of the Union or in such other service as may be specified in the enlistment notice and requiring him to present himself at such place and at such time and to such authority, as may be specified in the notice:

(3) The Central Government may pay to persons required to present themselves in pursuance of an enlistment notice served upon them travelling and other allowances in accordance with such scales as may be prescribed.

(4) If on the day specified in the enlistment notice as the day on which the person to whom the notice relates is required to present himself for national service—

(a) a postponement certificate relating to him is in force, or

(b) any appeal or application by him for postponement of national service is pending, the enlistment notice served on him shall be of no effect.

(5) The enlistment notice shall be served in such manner as may be prescribed.

Salary, wages, etc., and travelling allowances to be paid to persons enlisted for national service.

15. (1) Every qualified person who is called up for national service under this Act, or who is transferred from one form of national service to another, shall be paid such salary, wages, allowances, pension, disability and death compensations and other benefits as may be prescribed:

Provided that such payments shall be on scales not less favourable than those admissible to persons of like qualifications, experience and length of service in similar positions under the Government.

Explanation.—For the purposes of the foregoing proviso, the length of standing of a qualified person as an engineer or medical practitioner, as the case may be, shall be construed as the length of his service.

(5) The National Service (Hardship) Committee may, after consideration of the application for a postponement certificate or renewal thereof, grant or reject the same.

(6) The period within which the postponement certificate is in force shall be added to the period during which the person to whom the certificate was granted is liable under this Act to be called up for national service and accordingly this Act shall in relation to that person have effect as if for reference therein to the age of thirty years, there were substituted, an age being the sum of thirty years and the period during which—

(2) Where an application is made under sub-section (1), the person to whom the postponement certificate in question was granted, and where such certificate was granted on the application of an employer, such employer, shall be entitled to be heard on the application and the provisions as to appeals contained in section 20 shall apply in relation to the application as if it were an application for the grant of a postponement certificate.

(b) abrogate, either generally or in relation to a specified class of qualified persons, any right to apply for the grant of a postponement certificate and any right to appeal from the refusal to grant such a certificate, and may, by order, vary or revoke any order in force under this section, without prejudice however to the previous effect of that order.

(2) Where, on the day on which an order comes into force under this section abrogating any right to appeal from the refusal to grant a postponement certificate, an appeal preferred by a person to whom the order applies or the time for preferring such appeal by such person has not expired, the appeal shall be deemed to be dismissed or the time shall be deemed to expire on the expiry of that day.

(3) (a) If, on receipt of an application referred to in sub-section (2), the former employer refuses to reinstate the applicant on the ground that his circumstances have so changed as to make it impossible or unreasonable for him to do so, or denies his liability to reinstate such former employee, or represents that the reinstatement by him of the former employee is impracticable, he shall, before the expiry of a period of fifteen days from the date of receipt of such application, make an application to the National Service (Hardship) Committee for relieving him from the obligation referred to in sub-section (2).

(b) A former employee, who is not reinstated in his former employment within fifteen days from the date of delivery of the application made under sub-section (2), may, within a further period of fifteen days (computed from the date on which the first-mentioned period of fifteen days expires), represent to the National Service (Hardship) Committee that his former employer has not discharged the obligation imposed on him by sub-section (2).

(c) On receipt of the application referred to in clause (a) or the representation referred to in clause (b), the National Service (Hardship) Committee shall, after considering all matters placed before it and after making such inquiry in the matter as it may think fit, make an order—

(i) relieving the former employer from the obligation referred to in sub-section (2), or

(ii) requiring the former employer to reinstate the former employee in his former employment, or

(iii) requiring the former employer to pay to the former employee by way of compensation, for failure or inability to reinstate him, a sum not exceeding an amount equal to six months' remuneration at the rate at which remuneration was last payable by the former employer to the former employee.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

In the wake of the Chinese aggression, Government formulated a Compulsory Liability Scheme whereby engineers and doctors belonging to certain age groups, who were either in Government service or in the service of any public sector undertaking, were made liable to render service in the Armed Forces of the Union for a specified period. It is apprehended that this scheme might lead to a diversion of medical and engineering graduates away from Government service or service in any public sector undertaking. Besides, it has been found that the Compulsory Liability Scheme cannot, by itself, be relied upon to provide a sufficient number of doctors and engineers for the Armed Forces of the Union or for other forms of national service. It is, therefore, considered necessary that the liability should be extended to all persons who hold recognised medical qualifications within the meaning of the Indian Medical Council Act, 1956, or a degree in engineering or technology, or both. It is also felt that the Scheme should cover any kind of national service which the Government may specify and that the Scheme should not be restricted in its scope to defence efforts only. This will have the advantage of widening the base of recruitment to the Armed Forces of the Union and will also help in ensuring that doctors or engineers required for activities of national importance, such as, construction of dams in remote and difficult areas, family planning programme and health services in rural areas, etc., become available. It will also enable the setting up of an agency fully equipped with detailed and up-to-date information regarding the availability of engineers and doctors and of a machinery for their mobilisation which will be essential in the event of an emergency.

2. The Bill seeks to restrict the period for which persons may be called up for rendering national service to a period not exceeding four years. The Bill seeks to impose a further restriction to the effect that the liability of a qualified person shall come to an end on his attaining the age of thirty years.

3. The Bill also provides for payment to persons called up for rendering national service of remuneration at a scale which is not less favourable than the remuneration admissible to similarly placed Government employees. The Bill also provides that where a person, in employment, is called up for rendering national service, his former employer shall be under an obligation to reinstate him in his former employment on terms and conditions which are not less favourable to him, than those to which he was entitled before he was called up for national service.

4. The Bill seeks to give effect to the purposes mentioned above.

The 20th July, 1970.

FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

Clauses 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15 of the Bill provide for compulsory registration of persons liable to perform national service and the Central Government is required under the Bill to register and enlist qualified persons for national service. It is intended that the registration of qualified persons and other items of work connected therewith may be done through the agency of employment exchanges. A headquarters establishment would have to be set up to consolidate registration particulars and act on indents, issue various notifications and notices, etc.

Clause 18 of the Bill requires the Central Government to constitute a National Service (Hardship) Committee which will decide on applications for postponement of national service and enforce the reinstatement of an employee after completion of the national service.

The expenditure on account of the staff that may have to be incurred in this connection, together with incidental expenses, will be about Rs. 5,57,000 per year. There will be no non-recurring expenditure.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING DELEGATED LEGISLATION

Clause 36 of the Bill gives power to the Central Government to make rules for carrying out the purposes of the Bill. The matters in respect of which such rules may be made relate to the principles governing the calling up of persons for national service, form and contents of the National Service Register and the Certificate of Registration, priorities in accordance with which qualified persons may be enlisted for national service, scales of travelling allowances required to be paid, etc.

Clause 37 of the Bill empowers the Central Government to make regulations. The power of making regulations is confined to making provision for the examination of physical and mental fitness of qualified persons subject to registration, determination of the categories to which the persons who have been examined should be placed and specification of the principles to be applied by the National Service (Hardship) Committee while hearing an application for the grant of postponement certificate.

The matters in respect of which any rule or regulation may be made are matters of detail or of procedure within the scope of the general provisions and guiding principles of the Act and it is not possible to provide for them in the Act. The delegation of legislative power is, therefore, of a normal character.
